Charge of the Task Force

A high school diploma often serves as a prerequisite requirement for individuals to attain both independence and self-sufficiency. However according to the U.S. Census Bureau's 2010-2014 American Community Survey Five-Year Estimates, 9.8% of the population in Maryland who are between the ages of 18 and 64 do not have a high school diploma despite being able to earn one by graduating from a traditional high school program, passing the GED® tests, or completing the National External Diploma Program (NEDP®). In order to provide additional options for receiving a high school diploma, House Bill 1406 established a Task Force to Study the Adult High School Concept. The bill was sponsored by Delegates Clippinger, Anderson, Branch, Carter, Conaway, Glenn, Hammen, Hayes, Haynes, Lierman, McCray, McIntosh, Oaks, B. Robinson, Rosenberg, and M. Washington during the 2016 General Assembly Legislative Session and was codified in Chapter 244, Acts of 2016.

House Bill 1406 succinctly outlined membership and the key areas that the Task Force was to address. The areas covered a broad perspective on issues surrounding the concept of an adult high school. The Task Force was charged with studying and making recommendations regarding the concept of an adult high school and reporting these to the Governor and General Assembly on or before June 30, 2017. The Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation and the Maryland State Department of Education provided staff to the Task Force. In addition, members of the Task Force consisted of representatives from education, government, business, and community groups from around the State.

The members of the Task Force participated in six subcommittees. The individuals who participated in each group are listed in the Committee Membership section of this report. Each committee was asked to focus its work primarily on the statutory provisions of House Bill 1406 that pertained to its area of study. Experts on key topics also were invited to meetings, as applicable, to share practices, knowledge, successes, challenges, options, and policies. Committees met throughout the process and reported to the Task Force during meetings.

During the work of the Task Force and with the members' input, House Bill 1381 and Senate Bill 866 were proposed and passed to establish an Adult High School Pilot Program that would create an additional alternative method for adults who had not previously graduated from high school to earn a diploma. The recommendations from the Task Force will directly inform the approval, development, and implementation of such Adult High School Pilots. Although the work of the Task Force has been completed, the Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation and the Maryland State Department of Education will continue to work collaboratively to support House Bill 1381 and Senate Bill 866.

Information pertaining to the Task Force, such as meeting agendas and notes, are available at <https://www.dllr.state.md.us/aehs/> and <http://www.marylandpublicschools.org/Pages/ahscworkgroup/index.aspx> .

Executive Summary

The Task Force to Study the Adult High School Concept in Maryland was established in 2016 during the Maryland General Assembly session through House Bill 1406 in order to study and identify best practices and to make recommendations pertaining to enabling legislation and regulations for the development and regulation of adult high schools.

The current options for adults to attain a high school level of education outside of the traditional high school pathway in Maryland are preparing for and passing the GED® tests or completing the National External Diploma Program (NEDP®). Both of these programs offer a Maryland High School Diploma, jointly awarded by the Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation and the Maryland State Department of Education. A Maryland High School Diploma is a vital credential for adults seeking to obtain and retain employment or to enter postsecondary education or training. However, as the U.S. Census Bureau estimates the number of adults in Maryland without a high school diploma at roughly 500,000, the need for an additional pathway, such as an adult high school, to earn a high school diploma is evident. The Task Force worked to explore the models for adult high schools implemented in other districts and states and to make recommendations for establishing adult high schools in Maryland.

The Task Force was fully staffed and consisted of the individuals included in the Task Force Membership section of this report, who represented key stakeholder groups. Personnel from the Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation and the Maryland State Department of Education served as staff to the Task Force.

Seven full-group Task Force meetings took place between July 2016 and May 2017. These meetings provided the opportunity for members to collaborate and discuss key issues, receive input from experts in the field, share reports regarding committee work, and determine next steps regarding work of the Task Force. In addition, Task Force members also visited three different adult high schools currently operating in the Washington, D.C. area. The site visits offered Task Force members a chance to observe adult learners and see school models that aim to address their needs, interact with instructional and leadership staff to learn about effective services and structures within the schools, and ask questions to investigate the concept of adult high schools.

To further study, identify promising practices, and make recommendations, Task Force members worked in committees to focus on the following specific key areas:

- 1) Eligibility requirements, financial stability, and capacity standards for adult high school operators
- 2) Accreditation of adult high school operators, teachers, and instructors, including the appropriate accrediting agencies, standards for accreditation, and compliance and enforcement of standards

- 3) Adult high school operator reporting requirements and data collection, including effectiveness criteria that consider matriculation rates, degree attainment, types of credit, certification, degrees awarded, alternative high school diplomas, GED, External Diploma Program, and job placement
- 4) Matriculation requirements, including admission criteria and identification of the entity that will certify successful completion of an adult high school program, admission policy, student residency requirements, student transfers from the secondary education system, and a process for recruiting and selecting students
- 5) Curriculum content and requirements, including graduation credits and requirements, identification of the curriculum development entity, programs of study, course length and intensity requirements, the appropriate provisions of adult learner and skills services and services to underserved special needs populations and English language learners, and standards for flexibility and innovation
- 6) Funding requirements and options, including various models and model sustainability, public funding options, tuition-based models, and financial aid options

The Task Force believes that Maryland must do more to address the needs of adult learners by providing a variety of options, including adult high schools, for those who do not have a high school diploma to this credential. The opportunity provided through adult high schools would promote the success of the adult learners, maximize their human potential, and help them lead productive lives as members of the community by providing fulfilling academic and career experiences. As a result of the Task Force meetings, site visits, and committee work, the Task Force members recommend that the following be considered with regard to adult high schools in Maryland:

- 1) Continue to conduct research regarding promising practices or evidence-based practices in developing adult high schools and collaborate with the Maryland's associations for adult education and literacy in determining and sharing such practices.
- 2) Explore regulatory and/or statutory changes that need to be made in order to effectively implement adult high schools.
- 3) Explore funding structures and streams to develop and sustain adult high schools in Maryland.
- 4) Encourage adult high school operators to deliver instruction through multiple pathways such as face-to-face instruction, hybrid instruction, and online courses as appropriate to meet the needs of the distinct communities they intend to serve.
- 5) Require potential adult high school operators to explain how their program will prepare students to transition to employment or postsecondary education using contextual learning, career pathways, and integrated education and training, which would lead to an industry-recognized certificate or another method for successful transition.
- 6) Provide high school credit recovery options within the adult high school for adult learners who have left high school a few credits short of a high school diploma.
- 7) Explore opportunities to leverage and blend Maryland's current strong adult education programs with adult high school programming to customize learning for students.

- 8) Encourage postsecondary institutions in Maryland to develop a post-baccalaureate adult education certification as a part of the master's of education in adult learning program.
- 9) Require adult high school operators to have a data infrastructure that consists of a robust management information system.
- 10) Ensure that participants in adult high schools in Maryland are also residents of Maryland.

The Task Force desires for the adult high schools in Maryland to supplement currently existing programs for the GED® and NEDP® in order to provide another pathway for adult learners to attain a high school diploma. The adult high schools should in no way replace or limit the current programs or funding for GED® and NEPD®. Although the work of the Task Force has been completed, the members agreed that there is a need for continued research and partnership to engage community stakeholders, educational institutions, businesses and workforce entities, and State agencies in considering the recommendations and implementing House Bill 1381 and Senate Bill 866: Adult High School Pilot Programs.

Report of the Task Force

Adult high schools are designed with the specific needs of the adult learner in mind. They are intended to provide a pathway for adults who have not previously earned their high school diploma to continue their education and work toward earning a high school diploma. Adult high schools offer instruction, workforce development, wraparound programs, and other services. Andragogy and approaches that support adult learning are utilized to enhance the teaching and learning process for students enrolled in adult high schools.

The purpose of the Task Force to Study the Adult High School Concept was to examine the idea and feasibility of adult high schools and to share recommendations for their implementation in Maryland. Full-member Task Force meetings, site visits, and committee meetings were used to investigate the adult high school concept and to make recommendations.

Task Force Meetings

The group participated in seven Task Force meetings. An initial meeting was held online on July 22, 2016 to provide an overview of the bill and proposed timeline as well as to introduce the work to be completed in committees. The second Task Force meeting took place on August 15, 2016, at which time the selection of the co-chairs and membership of committees was determined. The next full-group Task Force meeting was held on October 4, 2016 to explore Maryland Charter Schools and Charter School Law, discuss a common set of interview questions for state, agency, and program leaders in adult education, and provide committee reports.

At the subsequent Task Force meeting on November 1, 2016, information about funding, participants, curriculum, credentials, wraparound services, and legislation was shared by one of the co-chairs, a Task Force member, and representatives from Goodwill Industries of the Chesapeake, who presented on the Goodwill Excel Center model. In addition, Task Force members also shared interview results from other state, agency, and program leaders in adult education. Pertinent demographic data on Marylanders who are between the ages of 18 and 64 and have less than a high school diploma was also shared. This data emphasized the need for options for adult learners to earn a high school diploma and the challenges faced throughout the State. The data is included in Appendix A: Maryland's Adult Population with Less than a High School Diploma. The January 19, 2017 meeting consisted of a review of proposed draft legislation to allow nonprofit organizations to establish adult high school pilots. To improve and clarify the wording and requirements for establishing adult high schools based on the information gathered to date, Task Force members discussed each section of the draft bill.

The next meeting, which was held on April 12, 2017, provided the opportunity to discuss House Bill 1381 and Senate Bill 866, which together established an Adult High School Pilot Program to take effect on July 1, 2017. House Bill 1381 (cross-filed with Senate Bill 866) is included in Appendix B of this report. The Task Force members discussed the role of stakeholders and the role that the Task Force may play in providing recommendations and guidance regarding the implementation of the pilots. The final full-group meeting of the Task Force took place on May 15, 2017. Subcommittee recommendations and rationales, the draft Solicitation for Proposals included in Appendix C, the approval process for pilots, roles and responsibilities regarding House Bill 1381 and Senate Bill 866, and the final report were discussed.

Site Visits

The Task Force participated in three site visits to further study the concept of an adult high school. A tour of Carlos Rosario International Public Charter School and Academy of Hope Adult Public Charter School took place on August 4, 2016. In addition, a panel was provided over lunch to provide a greater context for adult high schools in Washington, D.C. Participants included representatives of the Office of the State Superintendent for Education, the Public Charter School Board, the City Council Education Committee, and a local education and workforce policy organization.

Carlos Rosario International Public Charter School provides educational opportunities to the diverse adult immigrant population. The school model combines adult education with life skills and support services. In addition, English as a second language instruction is embedded in the school offerings. Task Force members identified the following strengths at Carlos Rosario International Public Charter School:

- A strong connection to community needs
- Wraparound services and school-based support that contribute to a high student success rate
- Workforce development programs that place graduates in jobs so that they can financially support their families while earning a postsecondary degree
- Workforce development programs that are strongly connected to community employment opportunities
- A full-time teaching staff with a strong professional development component and support for earning professional certifications
- A timeframe for services offered with morning, afternoon, and/or evening schedule blocks
- An accountability system for both the school and students
- Per-pupil funding.

The following were identified as challenges faced by Carlos Rosario International Public Charter School:

- Management of the operations and infrastructure, especially of the buildings
- Staffing requirements and recruitment
- Child care
- Transportation.

- Selection of students based on a lottery system and having many more adult learners who need to be served.

The Academy of Hope Adult Public Charter School offers two high school completion programs and preparation for the GED® tests or completing the NEDP®. In addition, the school provides bridge-to-college classes that allow adults to earn college credit while completing their high school credential. The following strengths were noted at this school:

- A community approach providing social activities as well as an academic environment
- A connection with the community college that provides a dual enrollment option
- The implementation of a homeless liaison position
- The use of a subsidized shuttle to improve access to the bus stop
- Services that reach a highly diverse population
- A diverse teaching staff and a strong support team
- Per-pupil funding.

The following were identified as challenges faced by the Academy of Hope Adult Public Charter School:

- Management of the operations and infrastructure, especially of the buildings
- Staffing requirements and recruitment
- Selection of students based on a lottery system with limited space
- Development of the workforce career programs.

Task Force members visited the Goodwill Excel Center Public Charter School in Washington, D.C. on November 10, 2016. This site was opened to adult learners starting in the 2016-17 school year. The Goodwill Excel Center Public Charter School provides services that focus on earning industry-certified certifications and a high school diploma.

The strengths identified at the Goodwill Excel Center Public Charter School are:

- A variety of wraparound services
- A community approach to success
- Designated spaces for instruction, technology, and support services
- Strong leadership
- A strong recruitment and hiring process for teachers
- Per-pupil funding.

Task Force members shared the following challenges faced by the Goodwill Excel Center Public Charter School:

- Management of the operations and infrastructure, especially of the buildings
- A need for additional child care
- Transportation
- The selection of students based on a lottery system with limited space

The site visits helped show the range of instructional, workforce development, and support services provided to adult learners to address the students' needs. Furthermore, the opportunity to talk with students and staff helped indicate strengths and areas in need of strengthening in the adult high schools. Leadership staff at the sites enhanced Task Force members' understanding of the structures, funding, staffing, and overall needs in operating the adult high schools. The panel with representatives from the Office of the State Superintendent for Education, Public Charter School Board, City Council Education Committee, and a local education and workforce policy organization provided a broader background for adult high schools' approval and operation within Washington, D.C. In addition, Adult Education D.C. Public Charter School PMF Performance Reports, including information for two of the sites visited, were shared. These school quality reports contain school profile, demographic, and performance data and can be found at <http://www.dcpcsb.org/report-topics/performance-management-framework-pmf>.

Committee Meetings

At the second full-group Task Force meeting on August 15, 2016, committee membership was determined. Initially, six committees were formed to carry out the Task Force's statutory duties to study and identify best practices in order to make recommendations with regard to:

- 1) Eligibility requirements, financial stability, and capacity standards for adult high school operators
- 2) Accreditation of adult high school operators, teachers, and instructors, including the appropriate accrediting agencies, standards for accreditation, and compliance and enforcement of standards
- 3) Adult high school operator reporting requirements and data collection, including effectiveness criteria that consider matriculation rates, degree attainment, types of credit, certification, and degrees awarded, alternative high school diplomas, GED, or External Diploma Program, and job placement
- 4) Matriculation requirements, including admission criteria and identification of the entity that will certify successful completion of an adult high school program, admission policy, student residency requirements, student transfers from the secondary education system, and a process for recruiting and selecting students
- 5) Curriculum content and requirements, including graduation credits and requirements, identification of the curriculum development entity, programs of study, course length and intensity requirements, the appropriate provisions of adult learner and skills services and services to underserved special needs populations and English language learners, and standards for flexibility and innovation
- 6) Funding requirements and options, including various models and model sustainability, public funding options, tuition-based models, and financial aid options

Based on the recommendations of the Task Force members, committees one/two and three/four were combined to work collaboratively. The individuals who participated in each group are listed in the Committee Membership section of this report. The committees met throughout the year to work on their specific tasks and provided reports regarding progress during the full-group Task Force meetings.

Adult High School Operator and Accreditation Committee

In reviewing models of adult high schools in states where they exist, the Adult High School Operators and Accreditation Committee (Committee 1/2) determined that different models are implemented. In one jurisdiction, adult charter schools provide a high school education to adults over the age of 21. The requirements for operating an adult charter school in this jurisdiction are intense, but the charter system provides a strong accountability structure that is directly tied to financial stability. Many of the adult charter schools began as community-based organizations (CBO). When applying for charter status, the CBO had to demonstrate a number of years of student success and good financial management. The funding obtained through the charter system allows the organization to take the program to the next level.

Some other adult high schools are authorized by the State Board of Education and operated by the local board of education. In one state, individuals 18 or older can participate in instructional courses to complete graduation requirements leading to a locally issued, state-endorsed high school diploma. After completing the required number of credits and successfully completing state-mandated assessments in another jurisdiction, an adult is awarded a standard high school diploma from the adult high school, district, or college where the student attended.

Adult high schools are accredited by the state in which the school is located and typically under the authority of the State Department of Education. They are designed in accordance with standards adopted by the State Board of Education. The approved curriculum must be able to provide educational experiences and instruction that allow adults to fulfill the requirements needed to earn a high school diploma.

To be eligible to apply and operate an adult high school as a part of the pilot program, the operator must be a nonprofit organization registered in the State of Maryland and have previous experience and success providing adult education, industry training leading to certification, and workforce and job placement services. The operator can partner with another nonprofit organization such as a county board of education or a public postsecondary institution to meet all the qualifications.

Reporting Requirements and Matriculation Committee

The Reporting Requirements and Matriculation Committee (Committee 3/4) contacted five adult schools in Massachusetts to glean information regarding admissions criteria, learners served, student recruitment, school governance, credential awarded, curriculum and resources, and reporting requirements. Although many of the schools interviewed did not know the specific databases used for reporting requirements, two of the adult schools indicated that they reported using the following databases: SMARTT and Effort-To-Outcome. Regarding reporting on success of the programs, the interview results of the five adult high schools indicated that they reported and used the following data to determine effectiveness:

- Attendance
- Average hours of attendance
- Number of students who were seen (i.e., who were interested enough to register and attend class)
- Number of students who were served (i.e., who remained enrolled long enough to benefit from instruction)
- Progress on standardized tests
- Number of students who graduated
- Number of students who earn an industry-certified credential
- Post-graduation plans (i.e., a job, entry into college or a bridge to college program, or entry into training)
- College graduation

Pertaining specifically to matriculation, the Reporting Requirements and Matriculation Committee first discussed research parameters to be completed before next scheduled committee meeting. The focus was on what characteristics were common amongst successful programs as well as to investigate matriculation requirements for functioning programs.

Through research, it became apparent that programs which offered college and career ready proficiency (high school diploma and approved industry certification), onsite job training, employer partnerships, a digital literacy component, alternative adult instructional delivery models (e.g., online, hybrid, or face-to-face), alternative diploma options, and high school exit assessments were more beneficial to adult learners and increased the opportunity for successful completion. Some of the least effective models were programs that delivered instruction only online, offered a non-registered GED® diploma option, and had expensive fees.

The committee’s next step was to develop a state matriculation matrix including information from Texas, Indiana, Arkansas, Tennessee, and Ohio. Commonalities between states were as follows:

Matriculation Requirements:	Range of state requirements
Admission Criteria Admission Policy Residency	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Available to students who have not earned a high school diploma or have failed to meet the requirements for a high school diploma or have not passed the exit exam • Must be 18 years or older; varies by state • Must be a state resident with proof of residency • Must have at least a third grade reading level; varies by state • Standardized placement test required • Open enrollment / cap of 150 -350 students; varies by state

Identification of the entity to identify/certify completion	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • State Boards of Education • Advisory Boards
Transfers from secondary education system	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Must have proof of withdrawal from a public school—no transfers • Students can stop out, or temporarily leave the program, and return
Process for recruiting and selecting students	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Standardized placement test • Advertising, brochures, VanGo buses, social services partnerships, community college partnerships, and work force employers
Accountability	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • High school diploma and industry certification completion • Successful completion of end-of-course and exit exams • Attendance/graduation rates

Officials in Ohio and Rhode Island answered questions generated by members of the Task Force through conference calls. Additional information was gathered on the importance of a data management system, a curriculum based on content standards, a professional development infrastructure, interagency communication, performance-based funding parameters, a bridge to college program, and student voice.

Curriculum Contents and Requirements Committee

After the Curriculum Contents and Requirements Committee (Committee 5) met and carefully reviewed the charge of the committee and the range of areas to be covered, the committee determined that the best course of action would be to hold off on recommendations for this charge until there was a deeper discussion of program models, budget constraints, and decisions on how the Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation and the Maryland State Department of Education would award diplomas. Curriculum content and requirements, for example, could vary widely to address any one of these factors. Ultimately, under the Adult High School Pilot specified in House Bill 1381 and Senate Bill 866, the areas of curriculum content and requirements will be addressed by the pilot organization as part of the plan submitted in response to the Solicitation for Proposals.

Funding Requirements and Options Committee

The Funding Requirements and Options Committee (Committee 6) met and identified a number of areas for exploration. The committee recognized that there are different ways to look at funding streams: by population, end product, general adult basic education funding, GED® preparation funding, and potential funding for post-GED® and pre-credit bearing programming.

The committee generated the following questions to pursue:

- Who do various funding streams attach to (e.g., demographic or barrier-focused funding)?
- What does the end product attach to (e.g., high school diploma, GED® certificate, or skills credential)?

One of the overarching questions that will need to be considered is whether other states fund a more efficient system through leveraged funding and/or state investment.

Additional Committee Meetings

After review of House Bill 1381 and Senate Bill 866 at the Task Force meeting on April 12, 2017, it was determined that two committees needed to continue meeting to provide additional input regarding best practices and recommendations. One of these two committees was dedicated to funding and the other to credentialing and accreditation.

Funding Requirements and Options Committee

The Funding Committee discussed two tasks that remain regarding funding:

- Potential mapping of all of the different funding streams that come into Maryland that could support an adult high school model and the adults they serve
- Developing an overview of how peer states fund programming for adult learners

Committee members will also continue to consult with national experts and contacts in other states to address the need for additional research pertaining to funding.

Credentialing and Accreditation Committee

The Credentialing and Accreditation Committee met on April 27, 2017 to discuss teacher credentialing, certificates in adult learning, criteria for determining appropriately trained instructional personnel, and pilot operator accountability. A fair amount of the information gathered for the adult high school accountability and credentials report was received from many different sources due to the lack of response to the initial committees on these topics. Information was gathered from annual reports, legislation, charter school applications, and government websites, including the following:

- Indiana General Assembly, 2014 Session
<https://iga.in.gov/legislative/2014/bills/house/1028>
- 2014-2015 Adult Education D.C. Public Charter School PMF Performance Reports

<http://www.dcpceb.org/application/goodwill-excel-center-application>

- Office of the State Superintendent of Education (D.C.) <https://osse.dc.gov/ed-credentials>

The committee used the following criteria to gather accountability and credential information from three adult high school entities: the District of Columbia Public Charter School Board for Adult Education, the Academy of Hope Public Charter School, and The Goodwill Excel Centers.

1. Who is the adult high school accountable to?
2. How does the adult high school hold itself accountable?
3. Which accountability measures are used?
 - a. Attendance
 - b. Assessments
 - c. Curriculum
 - d. Credential
4. What are the required credentials of administrative and teaching/training staff?

The results for the three entities are included on the subsequent pages.

Accountability Questions for the District of Columbia Public Charter School Board for Adult Education

Who is the adult high school accountable to?

- District of Columbia Public Charter School Board
- Office of the State Superintendent of Education
- High Schools Board of Directors

How does the adult high school hold itself accountable?

Adult Education Performance Management Framework (PMF) per the District of Columbia Public Charter School Board is used. The PMF measures program effectiveness by tracking student progress, student achievement, progress on mission-specific measures, and leading indicators of attendance and student retention. The report then places the charter school in a tier:

- Green - 1: high-performing (meets or exceeds weighted 65% - 100% on all indicators)
- Yellow - 2: mid-performing (meets at least weighted 35% - 64.9% on all indicators)
- Red - 3: low-performing (does not meet weighted 35% on one or more indicators)

PMF Technical Guide

www.dcpccb.org/performance-management-framework-pmf

Which accountability measures are used?

The tiers are graded on the following metrics:

- Student Progress: Improvement of One or More Educational Functioning Level (EFL) for Adult Basic Education (ABE) and English as a Second Language (ESL) in levels 1-6 for each.
- Student Achievement: GED® or NEDP® Attainment
 - Obtained secondary credential
- College and Career Readiness: Employment and Postsecondary Outcomes

Accountability Questions for the Academy of Hope Public Charter School

Who is the adult high school accountable to?

- The Office of State Superintendent of Education (OSSE) Adult & Family Education, which expects 38% of adults entering a subgrantee's program at the beginning-literacy level to complete that level

How does the adult high school hold itself accountable?

- Curriculum:
 - Developed their own curricula based on the National College and Career Readiness Standards for Adults/Revised to include inquiry-based critical thinking across subjects as related to the Common Core State Standards
 - A multilevel, cross-curricular program of instruction; classes follow two distinct strands (Language Arts and STEM), cover four academic areas (reading/social studies, writing, science and math), and align with five skill levels ranging from beginning literacy to high adult secondary education; this approach allows for individualized instructional programming for each adult regardless of skill level; for instance, a learner may take an advanced course in reading, an intermediate-level writing course, and a basic math class
 - Curriculum units can stand alone each term yet build on each other to form a yearlong sequence; this system helps students progress from one skill level to the next and accommodates those students who because of life circumstances have to stop out from time to time
 - Uses self-regulated learning to promote ownership of the learning experience and peer-assisted learning to promote motivation
 - Contains built-in journal-writing for reflection to help students deal with obstacles in work and life
 - Incorporated integrated digital literacy
 - Provides strengthened professional development for teachers/instructors trained in the Universal Design Learning (UDL) principles
- Support Resources:
 - Created a College and Career Resource Center that allows students to develop an individualized career plan
 - Launched a vocational evaluation center that matches adult learners with appropriate occupations and careers
 - Improved their case management system; they began using School Messenger for tracking the application, registration and enrollment process; this helps them intervene at any sign of trouble
 - Developed additional classes for decoding and comprehension challenges
 - Developed career workshops
 - Expanded hours for student support services
- Involvement:
 - Two students sit on the Board of Directors to guide decisions.

- The Student Leadership Council helps learners address challenges and host community events.

Which accountability measures are used?

 - 50% of learners enrolled for 12 or more instructional hours advance at least one National Reporting Standard Educational Functioning Level as measured by CASAS.
- Student achievement
 - 70% of adult secondary students who attempt the GED® will pass.

Next Steps: Adult High School Pilot Program

The work of the Task Force to Study the Adult High School Concept based on House Bill 1406 was completed on June 30, 2017. However, the Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation and the Maryland State Department of Education will continue to work collaboratively with each other as well as with local organizations focused on adult education in support of House Bill 1381 and Senate Bill 866 regarding the Adult High School Pilot Program. A Solicitation for Proposals will be developed and then disseminated on July 10, 2017. The initial deadline for proposal submissions is October 1, 2017.

Review criteria to be applied when evaluating the proposals also will be established. A committee consisting of staff from the Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation, and the Maryland State Department of Education as well as other key stakeholders will be formed to review and potentially approve the Solicitation for Proposals within 60 days of the October 1, 2017 submission. Once the Solicitation for Proposals has been approved, the State Board will work to approve each Adult High School Pilot's waiver within 30 days. The Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation and the Maryland State Department of Education will work together to notify organizations of approval or lack of approval of the pilots. Furthermore, technical assistance will be provided by these State agencies to the nonprofit organizations that have been awarded the pilot programs. In addition, the pilots will submit annual reports as required by House Bill 1381 and Senate Bill 866. The Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation and the Maryland State Department of Education will jointly submit a report to the Governor and General Assembly by December 1st, 2020. The report will include an evaluation of each approved pilot; a recommendation as to the expansion, continuation, modification, or termination of the pilot program; and demographic information regarding student enrollment and the fiscal solvency of the pilot program.

Recommendations

The Task Force reached a consensus on the following recommendations. While not in priority order, they are intended to suggest a range of approaches that need to be considered for adult high school programs that can effectively be offered throughout Maryland and capitalize on the intellectual capital of current adult education programs and organizations to support these approaches. Implementing these recommendations will promote the effective implementation of adult high schools in Maryland and provide adult learners with the opportunity to earn a high school diploma through completion of a program at an adult high school.

Recommendation One

Continue to conduct research regarding promising practices or evidence-based practices in developing adult high schools and collaborate with the Maryland's associations for adult education and literacy in determining and sharing such practices.

Rationale

Additional research is needed to determine how to best meet the needs of Maryland's adult learners through adult high schools. As options for adult high schools evolve and are informed by potential adult high school pilots, promising and/or evidence-based practices for funding requirements and options, standards for operators, as well as accreditation, curriculum content, reporting, and matriculation requirements need to be further explored and identified so that effective adult high schools can be developed and sustained. Further recommendations based on the additional research can be defined and communicated in collaboration with Maryland's associations for adult education and literacy.

Recommendation Two

Explore regulatory and/or statutory changes that need to be made in order to effectively implement adult high schools.

Rationale

House Bill 1381 and Senate Bill 866 establish an Adult High School Pilot Program and currently indicate that the State Board of Education "shall grant the pilot a waiver from any regulation that conflicts with the purpose and goals of the pilot's plan approved by the Department, including the student service requirement in COMAR 13A.03.02.05" and that a waiver related to the assessment requirements in COMAR 13A.03.03.06 may not be granted. In order to potentially provide adult high schools beyond those offered through the pilot programs, regulatory and statutory changes should be researched and proposed, as needed, so that waivers from requirements are no longer necessary. In addition, regulatory and/or statutory changes should incorporate a degree of flexibility in order for the Maryland State Department of Education and the Maryland Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation to make adjustments where necessary to best meet the needs of the adult learners served in the adult high schools.

Recommendation Three

Explore funding structures and streams to develop and sustain adult high schools in Maryland.

Rationale

Site visits to existing adult high schools and interviews with state/agency and program leaders in adult education indicate that per-pupil funding is often provided to adult high schools to establish and sustain them. In addition, the funding rate per pupil at existing adult high schools varies from state to state. For example, one jurisdiction reports that its adult high schools are funded at a rate of approximately $8,000 to $12,000 per student while another state funds adult high schools at a rate of $6,600 per pupil, which will increase to $6,750 for the upcoming school year. Furthermore, an adult high school within the same area previously mentioned indicates that it operates through funding that is 80% from public sources and 20% from businesses and other sources. Resources and performance-based funding parameters need to also be considered. Funding structures and streams, including various models and model sustainability, public funding options, tuition-based models, and financial aid options need to be explored and identified to develop and sustain effective adult high schools to benefit some of the roughly 500,000 adults in Maryland without a high school diploma.

Recommendation Four

Encourage adult high school operators to deliver instruction through multiple pathways such as face-to-face instruction, hybrid instruction, and online courses as appropriate to meet the needs of the distinct communities they intend to serve.

Rationale

Research conducted indicates that there are many providers of adult education offering only online instruction, which may exclude potential students who are not literate in the use of technology or do not have easy access to technology. Both the Carlos Rosario International Public Charter School and the Academy of Hope Adult Public Charter School in Washington, D.C. favor a multi-delivery approach of instruction to increase opportunities for student success. The Academy of Hope includes digital literacy as part of their curriculum as well. A teacher-supported, online instructional program affords adult learners with multiple responsibilities an opportunity to complete a high school program of study and earn their high school diploma. The landscape of learning in the twenty-first century includes multiple modalities of instructional delivery models to increase access to and engagement in quality educational experiences. Additionally, each school’s approach should be tailored to the specific needs of the communities in which they are sited.

Recommendation Five

Require potential adult high school operators to explain how their program will prepare students to transition to employment or postsecondary education using contextual learning, career pathways, and integrated education and training, which would lead to an industry-recognized certificate or another method for successful transition.

Rationale

Adult high school programs provide the opportunity for real innovation involving contextualized learning and the integration of promising practices for adult education and workforce development. The best model is to integrate such training into the high school model so that after a significant investment of time and energy, a graduate leaves the school ready and equipped to obtain meaningful employment. Integrated education and training programs connect instruction in reading, writing, mathematics, English language, and workforce preparation with training in a specific industry for the purpose of education as well as career development and advancement. Such programs have demonstrated success in accelerating learning and increasing student persistence while condensing the time required to achieve career goals. Career pathway models have been recognized as a successful strategy for unemployed or underemployed adults to move through various levels of employment on a specific career ladder within an in-demand industry by combining high-quality education, training, and other services. Studying academic subjects simultaneously with industry-specific training enables an individual to attain a high school diploma and a recognized postsecondary or industry-recognized credential concurrently.

Recommendation Six

Provide high school credit recovery options within the adult high school for adult learners who have left high school a few credits short of a high school diploma.

Rationale

Students who left high school prior to earning a diploma but earned significant high school credits may want to participate in a credit recovery program to attain their high school diploma. A review of an official high school transcript and input from a school counselor would determine the course of study required for the student to earn a high school diploma. Parameters for acceptance of transcripts would need to be determined in order to provide credit recovery options to adult learners.

Recommendation Seven

Explore opportunities to leverage and blend Maryland’s current strong adult education programs with adult high school programming to customize learning for students.

Rationale

Programs in adult education and literacy services in Maryland currently provide instruction in basic academic skills, contextualized workforce preparation, and English language acquisition. In addition, the programs currently offer high school diploma options for adult residents of Maryland who are over the age of 17, not currently enrolled in high school, and have not previously attained a high school diploma. Adult learners meeting these requirements can enroll in the NEDP®, prepare for the GED® tests, enroll in adult basic education/English as a second language (ABE/ESL) classes to increase their basic reading, math, and writing skills or learn the English language, and increase their readiness for work or job advancement. Provided that program and funding requirements are met, because adult high schools have goals related to academic and workforce preparation that are similar to those of adult education programs, options for leveraging and blending effective currently available adult education programs with enrollment in adult high schools should be explored to provide customized learning to meet the needs of the adult learners.

Recommendation Eight

Encourage postsecondary institutions in Maryland to develop a post-baccalaureate adult education certification as a part of the master’s of education in adult learning program.

Rationale

Students earning a Maryland High School Diploma through the adult high school option should receive the same rigorous instruction that is expected from educators teaching in the current kindergarten-through-grade 12 high school pathway. Depending on the student population taught, kindergarten-through-grade 12 educators are expected to have certification in early childhood, elementary, secondary, content areas, career technical education, English for speakers of other languages, special education, etc. The logical progression is to eventually offer an adult education certification as well so that teachers in adult high schools learn and can demonstrate content area expertise and mastery of adult learning theory. Postsecondary institutions that currently offer a certificate or master’s degree in adult education provide “high quality, research-based instruction in adult basic education” with a foundation in adult learning theory and practice. Instruction for the adult learner would be enhanced if teachers in adult high schools had this type of professional learning available to them.

Recommendation Nine

Require adult high school operators to have a data infrastructure that consists of a robust management information system.

Rationale

The adult high school operator needs to have an accountability system that identifies measures, establishes methodologies for data collection, and develops standards for reporting (U.S. Department of Education, 2016). The management information system should be able to collect and report data including, but not limited to, matriculation information, diploma attainment, and industry certification or postsecondary education degree attainment. Research on adult high schools in other states revealed that the management information system should be a dependable and comprehensive system for efficiency in reporting student outcomes (i.e., number of students enrolled, attendance, graduation, retention, and education/grade level gains) as well as secondary and postsecondary benchmarks (i.e., postsecondary credit earned, industry certifications earned, employment and wage gains). As a result of participating in the adult high school, students should see a measureable difference in their quality of life.

Recommendation Ten

Ensure that participants in adult high schools in Maryland are also residents of Maryland.

Rationale

Every state researched, including Texas, Indiana, Arkansas, Ohio, and Rhode Island, has a residency requirement either within its legislation and/or as a parameter within the provider's application. Maryland has a residency requirement to participate in current State-funded adult education programs. Students who successfully complete the requirements of the adult high school will be awarded a Maryland high school diploma, which will be jointly conferred by the Maryland State Department of Education and the Maryland Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation. Therefore, residency within Maryland should be a requirement of enrollment in adult high schools.
